

OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH & SAFETY (OHS) SERVICES

Occupational Health and Safety (OHS) is a critical component of any workplace, focusing on the well-being of employees by preventing accidents, injuries, and illnesses.

By implementing effective safety protocols, conducting regular workplace inspections, and providing ongoing training, organizations can create a safer environment for their teams. OHS not only helps in reducing risks but also boosts productivity, morale, and legal compliance.

A commitment to health and safety demonstrates a company's dedication to its workforce, ensuring that employees return home safely every day.

Prioritizing OHS is not just about meeting regulations—it's about fostering a culture of care, responsibility, and continuous improvement.

In Mauritius, according to the law, any employer having 5 or more employees, are now required to have a workplace safety and health policy and implement measures to protect employees from hazards. This includes assessing risks, managing health and safety, and training employees on workplace safety and health practices in line with "The Occupational Safety and Health Act 2005"
